DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 12-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jackson (2193196).

Jackson teaches a drafting device comprising a bottom roller and at least one pair of top front rollers opposed to the bottom roller with a circumferentially shaped apron surrounding each of the top front rollers (Figure 1), the aprons defining a clamping surface (if clamping surface considered between top and bottom roller, deflection member is positioned away from this) with the bottom roller, and a deflection member defining a recessed surface (77, 78) provided on a rigid holder detachably (figure 6) fastened on the roller shaft (figure 4) via a guide rod and having lateral guide members (57, square blocks) disposed at opposite sides of the recessed surface, with a deflection member associated with each top front roller around which the aprons run disposed away from the clamping surface. While Jackson essentially teaches the invention as detailed, he fails to specifically teach the apron being subjected to substantially only tractive tension from the apron trying to assume its circumferential shape, or in other words, the apron is loosely attached. It would have been obvious, however, to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to have put any size apron on a drafting machine when rebuilding after a cleaning session. Aprons come in different sizes, and if the ordinarily skilled artisan put the wrong size apron on this device, it would satisfy the requirements of the claims. Applicant's invention, as claimed, is nothing more than a well known device with an apron one size too big. The slightly larger apron would still rotate on the rollers and deflection members, but would not have the normal tension expected. Its not that the ordinarily skilled artisan would necessarily desire this looser apron, but if it were placed on the apparatus by accident, the ordinarily skilled artisan would have found it obvious to try and use the apparatus to determine whether he had to replace the aprons, or could use them even though they were a size too big. Likewise, by trying to use the apparatus, the method would obviously be taught.

Conclusion

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Yoshihisa et al (4513481), Wuermli (4067088), Cotchett (2943361), Wuermli (4509230), and Spencer (2856643) all teach what is well known in the art.
